

This is not what we love about
San Francisco.

We love San Francisco's natural beauty, vibrant culture, unique neighborhoods, diverse population and civic commitment and compassion.

We don't love the poor public schools, the skyrocketing housing prices, the homeless person we have to help out of our doorway every morning, the poor public transit, and streets and parks that suffer from neglect, graffiti and garbage.

What can be done?

With the desire to look for real solutions to these issues, a group of San Franciscans began Plan C, a non-partisan, grass-roots civic organization focused on ending the stalemate on vital quality of life issues such as:

- homeless solutions
- safe neighborhoods
- homeownership
- exceptional schools
- parks and the greening of SF
- clean streets
- effective public transit
- first class libraries and museums

We want a city that thrives and is livable for everyone. Plan C has become the moderate voice for those who strive to make San Francisco the best it can be.

How does Plan C work?

Plan C brings together individuals and organizations who have a concern about our city, informing them of opportunities to make their voices heard. Plan C supports candidates who believe in our goals, and we push for legislation on key quality of life issues.

Create change in San Francisco

The opportunity exists this fall to end the bickering at City Hall, create consensus and address the issues that have plagued San Francisco. With over 1,200 members, Plan C is the largest moderate voice within San Francisco and we are working to make change happen.
